Stoddard Baptist Global Care Highlights

Stoddard Baptist Global Care partnered with Casey Trees and hosted its Indigenous People's Day event on Saturday, October 7, 2023. The event was held in the Rose Garden to improve the aesthetics and beauty of the outside grounds by planting new trees and improving the general landscape. This celebration was the beginning of a new era of beautifying the campus and promoting harmony with communities both inside and outside of the facility.

The theme was: “Let's Plant Trees, Let's Plant Hopes, Let's Make a Difference”. The activities included the actual planting of trees, music, dancing and lots of fun with light refreshments served.

Mr. Steve Nash, President and CEO, and Ms. Sharline Everett, Administrator Liaison/Event Coordinator, appreciate the attendance of Mr. Sam Bonar, Constituent Services Coordinator/Scheduler for Council Member Zachery Parker.

SBGC Staff and Residents enjoy the Christmas tree decorations that were created and arranged by Mr. Larry Faison, Director of Food and Nutritional Services.

175th Church Anniversary

On Sunday November 19, 2023, Second Baptist Church celebrated its historic 175th Church Anniversary. The church was formally established as one of two of the city’s oldest “African American churches”, which was conceived in 1827 and officially established as Second Baptist Church in 1848.

This anniversary underscores a milestone in African American history and their legacy of service. District historians say the church was a stop on the Underground Railroad and was a venue for historical icons including Booker T. Washington, Frederick Douglass and Sojourner Truth. The church is also the site of the founding of the National Baptist Convention and is listed on the National Registry of Historic Places.

Since 1997, Rev. Dr. James E. Terrell has served as the fourteenth Pastor of Second Baptist Church. He was Assistant to the Pastor of Second Baptist Church from 1991-1997. Rev. Terrell, along with the support and hard work of the church members, has consistently led Second Baptist Church’s commitment of service for future generations in downtown Washington, D.C., by seeking new ways to reach out to the community. Second Baptist Church continues as a legacy and symbol of the vibrant African American community.

The Stoddard Family congratulates and honors Rev. Terrell and the Church Family for the many years of dedication and service in the community. Likewise, Rev. Terrell is appreciated for his faithful years of service as a Stoddard Baptist Nursing Home Board Member who currently serves as the Treasurer. May God greatly bless Rev. Terrell in his future endeavors as he continues to serve as a pastor and community leader within the Washington Metropolitan area.

STEVEN NASH

President and CEO, Stoddard Baptist

Steven Nash grew up hearing stories of his great-grandmother and her pennies from heaven. Her collection detailed donations she gathered for residents of Stoddard Baptist, a nursing facility in Washington, DC, where two of her children worked.

Flash forward 50 years and Nash is now an ordained deacon, father of three and self-professed “nature lover.” He’s also president and CEO of Stoddard Baptist Home Foundation, the longest serving African-American nursing home in the US — and the very place that meant so much to his great-grandmother.

Steven Nash was born in DC to a strict yet loving family. His parents pushed him to succeed academically and physically, nurturing his interest in science and football. When he was 5, his mother was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis and entered a nursing home. She died six years later, an experience that Nash says spurred his interest in healthcare administration.

Eventually, he attended Princeton University. While the biology major explored a side interest in art, he was greatly moved by ceramics professor Toshiko Takaezu. She taught him how art could serve as a creative release and complement his scientific studies. Nash sought out such inspiration from all kinds of educators in his early life.

“No matter what happens in your life, no one can take your education from you,” he says. “The gifts that you are given by God really can be brought out by finding that curiosity.”

Nash carried this love for learning well into adult life. He enjoys practicing Spanish, horseback riding and golfing, which he picked up to connect with his father before he died. Nash and his wife of 33 years, Ruth, also enjoy spending time with their children: a Fulbright scholar, a PhD candidate and a theater production professional. Nash jokingly maintains that his children received all of their intelligence from their mother.

Although he struggles to put a 51-year friendship into words, Nash’s childhood best friend, Jim Morrison III, says Nash is a “well-rounded, intelligent and caring person” who “builds lasting relationships with many.”

Nash’s heart of gold has allowed him to make many friends, some in high places. Last December, he was asked to lead a televised mass with Wilton Cardinal Gregory, the first Black cardinal in the Catholic Church. “I fell over when they called me!” recalled Nash, who also befriended Nobel Prize recipient Bishop Desmond Tutu at a LeadingAge conference after the two met in a VIP lounge.

For someone like Nash, who has had an illustrious career, pursued numerous passions and even crossed paths with some of his idols, it may seem like life is complete. He says, however, he still has much to look forward to, particularly with regard to growing Stoddard. His goal is to keep it running for another 120 years, despite the occasional setback.

“My Dad would always tell me that life is full of valleys and mountains,” Nash says. “You’ll be in a valley sometimes and your job is to get out of that valley as quick as you can to get to that mountaintop.”

As for the climb, Nash is still on his way to yet another peak.
